English Liberals Starting a Campaign.

Death of Prince Napoleon at Naples.

The Dispute Still Warm Between the Two Factions of the Irish Party.

LONDON, March 17 .- In reply to an address at Hastings by Tory leaders, Gladstone said he found little to blame in Lord Salisbury's foreign policy dur-ing recent years, but added that he condemned the policy of Goschen, Chancellor of the Exchequer, in concerting fictitious surpluses and concealing the real expenditures from Parliament in order to manufacture a satisfactory budget. Alluding to the Irish Parliamentary party, Gladstone said Parnell's speech in which he said he had opposed the claims of labor candidates in England in consequence of the obligation he was under to the Liberal leaders, was absolutely untrue so far as he (Gladstone) was concerned. He had always been ready to support the claims of labor can didates.

Touching upon the painful disclosures of the divorce court Gladstone said it was not his place to judge the amount of delinquency, but it was the part of the Liberals to consider upon what principles they would be guided in the dis-posal of their votes. The Liberals know that the cause of home rule depended upon them. The Liberals, added the veteran statesman, had arrived at a definite conclusion in regard to Parnell. He (Gladstone) was merely a reporter of the general conviction that the party was against Parnell. The Liberals were ready to face defeat, but they were not prepared to create a constitutional leader-ship for Ireland under such guidance as Parnell's. [Cheers.] In conclusion Gladstone expressed the opion that it was the duty of the Liberals to prosecute this great and patriotic purpose and to obtain justice for Ireland knowing that by courageous application of Liberal principles they would secure a union of the classes, dominion of the law and stability of the crown. [Cheers.] Gladstone also made an address in the Gaiety theater. He expressed en-tire confidence in the future of liberal-ism. He pointed out with regard to Irish members, that each had entered Parliament subject to a pledge that, on every question affecting Ireland the minority should sacrifice its own opinions and cooperate with the ma-jority. Every member of the Irish party from the leader down was bound by this pledge. It was true that in October, 1881, he denounced Parnell in the severest terms whereas for several years past he has been in active cooperation with him. He had denounced him because Parnell before then on more occasions than one, had used language dangerous to the empire respecting the total separation of Ireland, and also because Parnell bitterly opposed the land act upon which the Liberals relied as the great instrument for remedying the Irish grievances. When home rule was introduced in the house it was frankly and magnanimously adopted by the Irish party. The plan was based on the twin ideas of first, handing over to Ireland full and efficacious control of her local affairs, and second maintaining equally full and efficacious imperial con-

"If any fresh plan of home rule is proposed, as I trust it may be," continued Gladstone, "I hope it will be founded on rigid fidelity to those bases, neither of which can be justifiably separated from the other. Parnell recently said: 'It may be time to think of Tor allies.' They played that game once and it did not answer. The Tory concience does not care much about home In conclusion, Gladstone said the lection in Hartlepool showed that Liberals were never more solid, self-pos-sessed or determined to prosecute their march as a united house, toward the attainment of a great object.

Prince Victor, shortly before the death, entered the room, but was so overcome with emotion that he left the apartment sobbing violently. The funeral will be conducted with religious ceremonies.

London, March 17.-The Paris correspondent of the News says that Prince Napoleon went to counsel King Humbert on the dangers of the Driebund and to advocate a plan to have the Prince of Naples marry Princess Letitia, of Orleans. Prince Napoleon gave copies of his wills to several trusted friends and ordered that his memoirs should not be published.

Merchants Refused Gold Bars for Shipmer by the Government. New York, March 17 .- This afternoon Superintendent Mason of the assay office, received notice from the Director of the Mint that $1,000,000 in gold absorbed by two firms will not be allowed to be taken for export.

This is the first time in eight years the Government has refused to allow gold bars taken for export. Three years ago the assay office had $90,000,000 in gold and silver bars behind its counters, but the steady drain for the last two years had reduced the stock to $18,000,000 and the prospect of further depletion was plainly apparent. If firms desire to ship gold they will have to draw gold from the sub-treasury.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 17 .- The Post's Sacramento special says that another great sensation is about to be sprung in this Legislature. It is impossible to detail the exact nature of it, but Attorney-General Hart has evidence which will convict a number of Legislators with having received bribes. The sensation is based on the discovery of certain pieces of paper in a wastebasket in the office of the State Librarian. W. S. Leake, Assistant State Librarian, is quoted as saying that at 9 o'clock this morning two Assemblymen, who have been supporting DeYoung note from the World's Fair Auxiliary but who today voted for Felton, came Association, tendering him an honorary into the State Librarian's private office membership and suggesting that a song and made some figures on manilla paper,
